

Rwanda youth have passion for the Blues

>>I regularly travel to Rwanda with a charity based near Stamford Bridge called Survivors Fund, which helps survivors of the Rwandan genocide.

Having spread the Blues word in Tanzania on previous visits and being a season-ticket holder for many years too, I have been pleasantly surprised to see a surge in Blues colours over the past eight years of my visits.

While visiting with a group in October I had the pleasure of playing a full 90 minutes with representatives from the London Oratory School (also next door to Stamford Bridge) against The Don Bosco College in Kabaronda, East Rwanda. As you can see, one of our team was concealing a surprise

The game was a thrilling 5-5 draw. It was a great experience.
